

“Among all the things I do, I feel most true to myself when I am painting.”

Becky S Kim is a fine artist, specializing in watercolor and oil painting. She has had a passion for the visual arts ever since she was a teenager living in South Korea. She studied nursing there while also taking private lessons in classic drawing, watercolor, and oil painting.

After moving to the United States in 1982, Becky studied design and drawing as an art student at Southern Illinois University and later studied drawing with Robert Liberace at The Art League School in Alexandria, Virginia. Her work continues to evolve as she experiments with new techniques and styles. She has most recently been attending painting workshops led by artists such as Burton Silverman and Charles Reid. She works in a variety of media, but watercolor and oil are her favorite.
